

CONCERNING P. FREEMAN LAZOR'S SONGWRITING

OPINION OF STEVEN J. KELLEY, OF LOS ANGELES

I have listened intently to P.F. Lazor sing some of his songs, a cappella, including "BLOOD IN THE RAIN" AND "LOVE ME NOW". I can only imagine what his compositions would sound like once engineered with instrumentation, since I noticed his audience in this small group of people transfixed as he sang.

In my opinion, Lazor's songs are definitely top 10 hits. I was asked if I "think" the public would buy these songs -- no, I know the public would jump at the chance to buy the songs I heard by P.F. Lazor.

On a scale of 1-10, I would rate the selections I heard as 8.5*; a caliber which could only come from the best of songwriters and performer-stylists in the business (such as Mick Fleetwood, Neil Diamond, Barbra Streisand, Barry Manilow, Willie Nelson.....to name a few).

Figuratively speaking, Peter, Paul & Mary would kill to have this type of material. There are distinct strains also of the immortal styles of Bruce Springsteen and Paul Simon in Lazor's songs. Neil Diamond would be the perfect singer of Love Me Now, and Willie Nelson or Diamond suited for Blood In The Rain.

Lazor's songs are not only philosophically enlightening, but there is also great congruity and harmony in the match between tune and lyrics. They possess a distinct spiritual element while at the same time have a political gravitation toward life in general.

Though comparable in quality to some of the greats, Lazor's words are unique, in their own right; as so well demonstrated in Blood In The Rain.

I, Steven J. Kelley, declare under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is my true and honest opinion, and that I do not personally know P.F. Lazor well, and I have no personal interest or gain in making these statements.
