HEAR IT IN THEIR SILENCE

3-21-14 (1) (#17)

- Something's happening, but the whole world's asleep Hear it in their silence, fear it is their violence. Minds so shallow sense there's something so deep Heard it in a bird's song, but it worded all the words wrong.
- 2. Truth's so obvious there is no need to speak The young will never try it, the stung will never buy it. Adult children still playin' ghost hide-and-seek They'll never hear the silence, they'll ever fear the violence !

 BRIDGE:
 But silence is where all the sound comes from men will live and die to kill it in insistence they must fill it with their toys of the noise of destruction.

 Flailing infants, each one,

 Wildly spraying a machine gun prying fingers tied to triggers dying to face any rigors

 to never, never hear,

 to ever live in fear of the sound that once surrounded our world . . .

- Ever hear a star sing ? No, the ones in the sky You won't know what you're missin' you don't know how to listen.
 Solutions to the chaos and perennial "why ?" prove never too conclusive, and ever too elusive.
- 4. Windows of vision long obscured with illusion Can't see when you're stark blind, can't free such a dark mind. Pristine silence hunted as an intrusion While many keep their ration do any reap salvation ?

[INSTRUMENTAL] [REPEAT BRIDGE]

 TAG:
 . . . Hear it in the silence,

 fear it in the violence.

 . . . They'll never hear the silence, they'll ever fear the violence . . .
